CAN CORN CAUSE LAMINITIS?

A friend told me that the worst thing to feed horses is corn. She claims it is the leading cause of laminitis. Is there any truth to this statement?

This statement is not completely true, but it is also not completely false.

Corn is not the leading cause of laminitis, and when fed correctly it does serve a purpose in feeding horses. However, if not fed correctly it can cause problems.

Corn contains a lot of starch, which is rapidly broken down into glucose and used for energy. This type of energy is used up very rapidly and gives many people the impression that their horse is acting "hot." This is why corn is often thought of as a "hot feed." Picture, for example, a kid who has just eaten a lot of candy, and has a lot of energy (aka a "sugar high"). What happens next? They get very tired very quickly, or "crash." The same thing happens to horses that have consumed a lot of starch. They have a lot of energy all at once and then they crash. If a lot of starch is fed to a horse that is overweight or at high risk for metabolic problems, it could cause colic or laminitis.

Many sweet feeds containing corn have only about 20-30% corn. For most horses whose diet consists of mostly pasture or hay, adding a few pounds of sweet feed to their total diet should not cause problems. Keep in mind that overweight horses should not have any sweet feed in their diet, let alone much corn. But most horses on a good quality hay (or other forage) diet should not have a problem with a limited amount of sweet feed or other grain supplement.

HORSE NAMES-DON'T "HORSE AROUND" - BE CREATIVE!

by: Half Vast Connie

Christening a horse with a name appears to be a difficult task!
But, please, oh please, no human name I just have to ask!
I have a pony someone named Hannah Montana. Did they select the name in haste?
Kids form a long line to ride her, but the name fills my mouth with distaste!

I have a very pretty pony, brown the color of her locks!
Three white "anklets" at the bottom of her legs, so she's "Three Socks!"
Kids ask questions about her name. Information, they want more....
We answer by saying, "She's Three Socks because she doesn't have four!!!"

A foal at my place was born and right away his name I had a clue!
With long legs, his namesake after my favorite racehorse. I called him "Slew"!

But, though just a newborn, Slew escaped from his paddock, I have to confide....

So I was forced to rename him with the new label of "Slewicide"!

I had a girlfriend and her friend coming to my house for lunch to dine!
So I set the table with tablecloth of linen and my china so fine!
I wasn't prepared for the scenario-I NEVER am, of course!
Her friend she called, "Julia" was actually the name of her HORSE!

Now my white pony, "Snow", I had no doubts. It was a perfect name, I felt!

Sometimes he's dirty. We call him "Slush", like when snow starts to melt!

One pony of white, I call, "Casper" with his eyes of dark blue!
He's just a little bit "spooky" no matter how much training I do!

One white pony arrived in a trailer full of alpaca, he came....
He's white like toilet paper so "Charmin" is his name!
I rescued a very old black pony who's my favorite, you can be sure!
I named him, "Rusty" because all his "parts" probably were!

I have a cat with Siamese markings, brown, black, and antique white!
I christened her "Mocha" the name was so perfect, so right!!
She does crazy antics, once flew in front of TV screen, just like E.T.!
We now call her "Too Much Mocha"-my vet even thinks name should be!

Naming a cat, "Mocha" I did start having doubts about that!
Maybe the label alone was why she was such a brat?
I question now about always calling her a pain.....
If the name was the reason a brat she became?

You wouldn't name your newborn child with a horse's name, I figure....

I don't know of any kid called "Champ", "High Ho Silver" or "Trigger"!

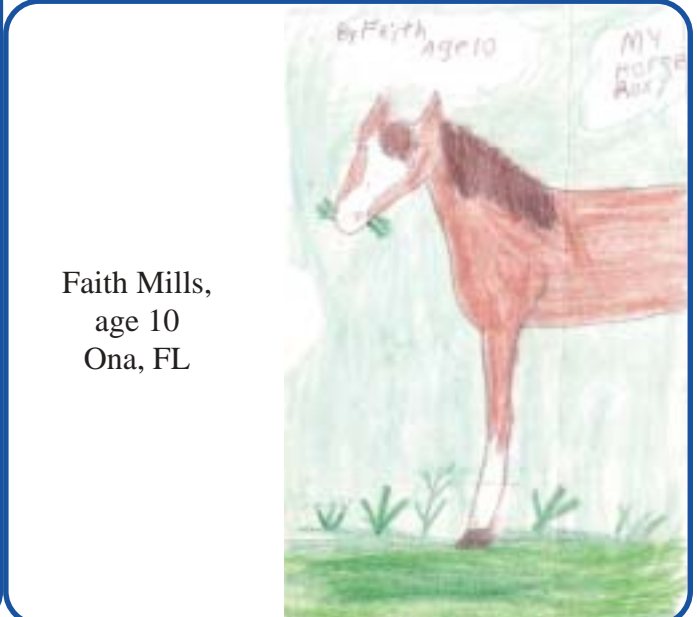

In naming horses human names, do they like people become?
Rude, disrespectful, controlling and with behavior so dumb?
Please! Oh please! No human names for our horses, I just have to ask!
From someone whose name says it all-I am always-"Half Vast!"
